In this video, we'll take a quick tour of the Customer Join Mike Marcin as he features the DynamicPoint Customer IMPORTANT LINKS & LINKS & WEBSITE & Quick Tour: Inside our Client Portal It's time to give clients an easy way to do Small business owners across the United States are confronting a new reality: a single, government-run portal now handles tax filings, licensing renewals, and federal contract bids. While the promise is a smoother workflow, many entrepreneurs still wrestle with unfamiliar interfaces, missed deadlines, and hidden fees. Understanding the structure, typical pitfalls, and practical shortcuts can turn the portal from a source of frustration into a competitive advantage. The federal portal consolidates services that once required separate log-ins for the IRS, SBA, and contracting agencies. For a boutique retailer or a family-run manufacturing shop, this means one password protects multiple critical tasks, reducing the administrative overhead that previously ate up evenings and weekends. Moreover, the portal feeds real-time compliance alerts, helping owners avoid costly penalties that can arise from late filings. First-time users begin by creating a Unified Business Identifier (UBI) linked to their legal entity. After verification, the dashboard presents three core modules: Tax, Licensing, and Contracting. Each module mirrors the same navigation logic—select a service, upload required documents, and click “Submit.” The backend routes data to the appropriate agency, while the portal logs every transaction for audit purposes. Think of each module as a row in a garden. Proper planting—accurate data entry—yields a clean harvest of approvals, whereas weeds—duplicate entries or expired documents—can choke the process. Forgotten passwords. The portal enforces a strict 90-day rotation; using a password manager eliminates lockout risk. Document format mismatches. PDFs must be under 5 MB; compressing images beforehand prevents rejection. AFFILIATE DISCLOSURE: This video contains an affiliate link to OneSuite.
