Several common oversights accelerate wear and reduce the journal's lifespan. Using household cleaners on the cover strips protective coatings, while exposing the book to direct sunlight or high humidity causes paper to yellow or curl. Storing the journal under heavy objects can strain the spine, and frequent handling without clean hands introduces oils that stain pages. Additionally, ignoring the need to rotate the journal's orientation can create uneven pressure on the binding, leading to premature cracking. Harsh cleaning agents: Replace with a dry microfiber cloth; avoid solvents or abrasive wipes. Excessive moisture: Keep the journal in a environment with moderate humidity; use silica packets if needed. Improper storage pressure: Store flat or on a supportive stand; avoid stacking heavy items on top. come chat with me while I show you my daily pages in my B5 notebook. Â ...
